STP Marketing

Segmentation

Chick-fil-A can segment themselves in South Korea based on demographics and lifestyle preferences.

Demographics:

- Middle-High income
- Teens, Students, & Adolescents

Psychographic:

- Values quality & affordable food
- Trendy & Western brands

Behavior:

- Often eats out
- Brand loyalty

(Santander, 2024)

Targeting

The average income of most South Koreans is about $36,000 USD (Gokmen, 2025), so Chick-fil-A should target middle-high income teens or young adults that can afford quality fast food, attracted to western brands, and enjoy convenient fast food.

Positioning

Product-wise Chick-fil-A should price their products at a reasonable, affordable price, making their value unique to this demographic. South Koreans are careful spenders, and look for quality brands at a cheap price. (Kim, 2024) With affordable fast food products, it gives the audience an incentive to purchase from Chick-fil-A, developing brand loyalty.

Marketing Funnel Strategy

- Awareness: Since Chick-fil-A is entering as a new fast food chain in South Korea, they have to promote themselves through social media to show that they exist. This is because social media is mainstream throughout South Korea.
- Consideration: Offering bundles & 1st time discounts will allow South Korea's to consider trying out this brand, since they are careful spenders.
- Conversion: Limited time deals give the customers an incentive to buy from Chick-fil-A at a good price. This strategy would convert consumers to customers once they experience the quality of products due to the reasonable price.
- Loyalty: Rewards system would give the consumer an opportunity to earn points through purchases and use their points to redeem for an item. This makes the customer want to come back per visit.
- Advocacy: Through customer word of mouth, they can promote Chick-fil-A to their friends or family. By doing this, consumers would be inclined to try something new.

Regulations in South Korea that limit marketing decisions

The Act of Fair Labeling & Advertising & Korea Fair Trade can limit marketing decisions, as they protect consumers through goods and services sold by businesses. \(Jo et al, 2024\) These regulations include advertising, door-to-door, & product liability. Every business in South Korea is required to follow these regulations, since National and local governments are required to enforce. In terms of marketing decisions, businesses must be transparent with their advertising and promotion, meaning these aspects have to be honest without lying or over exaggerating.

Solution

My marketing plan can overcome this legal challenge by focusing Chick-fil-A's branding to be transparent to consumers. Through transparency, they can be by being honest with their content, meaning all information is true without over-exaggeration. \(Back & Han, 2025\) This can be portrayed through advertisements or brand packaging, ensuring that the relevant information is presented to the consumer, and can be proven as reliable. For example, Chick-fil-A can be clear about the ingredients used to cook their burgers, fries, and chicken.

I can create a marketing strategy for my target country and demographic that reflects the business' unique selling proposition and explain how it will be effective in selling our product or service to my target market demographic

My marketing strategy for targeting South Korean middle-high income teens and young adults reflects the business' unique selling proposition through sustainable, quality, trendy, and affordable fast food. Advertisement #1 represents this strategy well by showing the unique points of the meal, such as quality ingredients, a well presented product, and an affordable price. This strategy will be effective in selling Chick-fil-A products to this target demographic due to affordability and quality. South Koreans are careful spenders, especially significant changes in the economy. \(Seo, 2025\) Socially, South Koreans values excellence as in having high standards. \(Salami, 2025\) Lastly, South Koreans care about the environment, as they prefer eco-friendly packaging. \(Ha, Jeon, & Park, 2023\) While considering these factors of South Koreans, my marketing strategy for Chick-fil-A ensures to reach their unique selling point across consumers, converting them into loyal customers.

I can develop a marketing mix analysis for my business utilizing the 7Ps of marketing

Product	Chick-Fil-A will sell quality and affordable products, such as their burgers, chicken, fries, drinks. They can do this through developing affordable bundles to entice consumers to buy. My advertisement shows this through each unique item in the meal.
Promotion	Social media is a popular form of advertising, as South Korean consumers are heavily influenced by the internet. (Wordbank, 2022) This will make Chick-fil-A stand out for their uniqueness.
Price	To make pricing stand out, Chick-fil-A can do competitive pricing against local fast food chains. One way of doing this is making products very affordable through deals and limited time promotions. The pricing in the advertisement stands out, as it is a limited time deal.
Place	Locations will be exclusive, meaning in places, such as Hongdae, where majority of the target demographic is located. Additionally, mobile delivery will be an option as well to ensure to meeting demand. The advertisement is making Chick-fil-A exclusive to Hongdae locations.
People	The target demographic will be middle-high income teens and young adults. This target is ideal, as they enjoy trendy and quality items.
Process	Through mobile transactions, it will make the process of purchasing products fast and efficient through methods, like Kakao Pay, Toss, Naver Pay, Payco, and Samsung Pay. (Shubham, 2025)
Physical Evidence	The customer experience when entering stores, such as quality products, packaging, and an enjoyable space to dine in with friends or family. In the advertisement, it shows why the physical product is worth getting, such as the sandwich.

I can justify my marketing decisions using evidence from market data, competitor analysis, or industry research, explaining why my overall strategy will be effective in the target country.

Through market data and industry research, my overall strategy for Chick-fil-A in Korea will be effective. While analyzing consumer habits, South Koreans are price-sensitive, meaning they will look for brands at a reasonable price with similar quality \(Kim, 2024\) Creating deals and limited time offers will reach South Korean consumers to want to try Chick-fil-A, as they can expect the quality will be similar to local fast food; however, a cheaper price. Additionally, 60% of families claim to be in the middle class. \(Commisceo, 2016\) This allows us to reach our target market, which is teens through young adults. Social media is mainstream throughout South Korea with Tiktok, Instagram, and Naver Line being reliable forms of promotion. \(Wordbank, 2022\) As for industry research, competitors are utilizing sustainability as a marketing advantage. South Korean brands are reacting to this trend late, unlike foreign competition. \(Lee et al, 2024\) Chick-fil-A will adapt to this trend quickly as a new fast food chain, attracting the attention of consumers throughout South Korea.

I can develop a marketing mix analysis for my business utilizing the 7Ps of marketing.

Product	South Koreans value products that are presented with quality, which can be viewed as the likeable taste in Chick-fil-A's sandwiches or chicken. My advertisement shows this by showcasing how the product is made, such as ingredients.
Promotion	Focusing on promoting through social media can reach the target audience within the demographic, utilizing popular platforms, like Instagram or Naver line. My advertisement can be promoted through these platforms.
Price	Through utilizing deals and limited time offers at a cheaper price, it encourages South Korean consumers to buy from Chick-fil-A. If they see two products with the same quality, they will always choose the cheaper alternative. My advertisement shows a clear message that it is affordable.
Place	Locations will be convenient, meaning accessible for consumers in busy city areas, like Hongdae being trendy among teens and young adult demographic. Moreover, utilizing mobile delivery will reach more consumers.
People	Korean culture values collectivism, where they maintain harmony, family honor, and prioritize group needs. With collectivism, it promotes loyalty, teamwork, and collaboration. (Salami, 2025) This enforces friendly and caring service in stores.
Process	Valuing efficiency through technology will meet South Korean standards. Through convenient payment methods, like digital transactions, can meet this criteria. Stores will accept any form of payment, including digital transactions.
Physical Evidence	Inside of stores can be seen visually appealing through aesthetics, attracting consumers to want to come inside. Status symbols in society are homes, cars, dress, education, and club memberships. (Commisceo, 2016) This also includes packaging of products being eco-friendly as well. My advertisement shows this by showcasing the uniqueness of the product.
